

PROFILE

A public university and a member of the CPU, CGE, and CDEFI, UTT is one leg of a four-member network with the Université de Technologie de Belfort-Montbéliard, the Université de Technologie de Compiègne and the university of Sino-European Technology of the university of Shanghai. UTT's mission is education and research and transfer of technology. It grants the diplôme d'ingénieur, master's and doctorate.

Founded in 1994, UTT has a dynamic international policy with special programs for foreign students.

Four tracks are offered:

- Mechanical systems
- Industrial systems
- Information and telecommunications systems
- Materials: Technology and Economy

Curricular structure: semesters, transferable credits ECTS, 2 industry internships of 6 months each, programs for international students, training matched to the labor market.

Research

Beyond the transmission of knowledge through teaching, UTT has another essential mission: research—the creation of knowledge.

The quality and diversity of the work conducted by UTT's 6 research teams, gathered within the Institute Charles Delaunay, the synergy of the teams with national and international research organizations, and the dual quality of instructors and researchers guarantee the quality of UTT's teaching and make it a significant center of research in France.
